

<https://www.survivalinternational.org/news/14043>

India's Indigenous peoples rise up against evictions from tiger reserves

September 20, 2024

Adivasis facing eviction from Nagarhole Tiger Reserve protest at the park's entrance.

Adivasi (Indigenous) people have organized mass protests across India to denounce forced evictions from their forests to make way for tiger reserves.

Thousands of people facing eviction from their villages, and some already evicted, joined the protests last week and this week at several of the country's most famous tiger reserves – including Nagarhole, Udanti-Sitanadi, Kaziranga, Rajaji, and Indravati. Many more protests are planned.

The director of India's National Tiger Conservation Authority (NTCA) sparked outrage among Indigenous communities in July when letters published after a Right to Information request revealed that he had written to Chief Wildlife Wardens in 19 states urging them to evict more Adivasis from tiger reserves.

Tiger Reserve tribes

Tribe

Share

Decolonize Conservation

Campaign

Featured

"Raped and beaten": Prince Harry charity linked to horrific abuses in Africa - new investigation

Sat January 27, 2024

Almost 700 Adivasi people from 25 villages protested at the entrance gates of Nagarhole in Karnataka state, one of India's best-known tiger reserves. Close to 400,000 Adivasis face eviction from tiger reserves across India.

Thousands of Adivasis from India's tiger reserves are protesting. Close to 400,000 are living under the threat of eviction.

Leading Adivasi activist JK Thimma said at the protest: “Declaration of tiger reserves on our lands is a violation of the law as our people neither consented to it nor were consulted in the process. Today they have put up signs on our lands declaring them national parks and tiger reserves. NTCA is a trespasser on our lands. This violation of Indigenous rights must immediately stop and the conservationist cartels (including NGOs like WWF, WCS & WTI) who are involved in doing this must be punished according to the law.”

The lives of hundreds of thousands of Adivasis in Indian tiger reserves are being destroyed in the name of tiger conservation. The Indian government is illegally evicting them from the land where they have always lived, land which they have always protected.

The big conservation organizations such as WWF and WCS never speak out against the evictions, and claim that “relocations” of tribal people are “voluntary.” But the “relocations” are almost always, in fact, forced evictions.

French government scraps funding plan for Kahuzi-Biega National Park, citing human rights concerns

Thu July 20, 2023

Kenya government illegally evicts Ogiek from their ancestral forests during King Charles's state visit

Fri November 03, 2023

Related news articles

Killed for gathering snails in National Park: Indigenous man beaten to death by soldiers

Wed July 29, 2020

New report reveals tribal evictions for tiger reserves are illegal

Tue December 10, 2019

Court case reveals shocking details of abuse in tribal residential schools in India

Mon December 02, 2019

These Khadia men were thrown off their land after it was turned into a Protected Area. They lived for months under plastic sheets.

Survival International's Director Caroline Pearce said today: "The Indian authorities seem hellbent on sticking with a totally outdated and discredited colonial model of conservation, one still backed by the likes of WWF and WCS, which views Indigenous peoples as trespassers on their own lands, and brutally evicts them.

"There's a deep-seated racism at work here – the government and conservation organizations view the Adivasis as second-class citizens at best.

"These evictions are unlawful according to both national and international law, and don't work – the forest, the Indigenous people and the tigers can't survive without one another. Conservation organizations and tour operators are complicit in this scandal – once the people have been cleared out of their ancestral forests, tiger reserve tourism is big business."

Indian government scraps "dangerous" forest law after outcry

Fri November 15, 2019

Most recent

Venezuela: Yanomami people engulfed in worst health crisis for decades

Fri July 11, 2025

Maasai demand Volkswagen pull out of carbon offset scheme on their lands

Tue July 08, 2025

Indonesia: Presidential visit for new EV battery factory is "a disaster for uncontacted Indigenous people"

Tue June 24, 2025

India: Police raid Indigenous settlement inside tiger reserve

Wed June 18, 2025

About us

Our impact

Jobs

Annual reports

Join our mailing list

Send an email

Sign our

I Incontacted pledge

Leave a legacy

Donate in celebration or memory

Other ways to give

Deutsch

Español

Français

Italiano